100+ Million Americans are Caregivers<sup>1</sup>

Caregiving is rarely planned for, yet many discover – too late – just how expensive it is, and how underinsured they are.

Think it won't happen to you? Think again!

One in five full-time workers is a family caregiver.<sup>2</sup> Most of us lack the experience, money and time needed to balance caregiving with our own lives.

Long term care services are expensive!

Without a plan, savings can disappear, choices become limited and the burden falls on family. Preparing now protects your future and your loved ones.<sup>3</sup>

I planned at 27. At 39, I needed care. That plan gave me freedom—and spared my family.

At 27 I was getting married, well entrenched in my career path and had no chronic conditions, no concerns about impending disease, nor did I think I would need long term care until well into the future (like my 401k).

At age 39 this dramatically changed. I couldn't write, my balance was off, and I was seeing double. My early decision to secure long term care coverage means I have total control over how I receive care, and it also means I do not burden those I love with providing my care. If I had waited to purchase a policy until I was 40, I would have been uninsurable.
